Dear Mr. Norris:

My personal comments concerning your address are all favorable. If you could introduce a little more humor in your talk, it might relieve the tension when speaking to a group of business men. However, your talk, just as it was delivered, would be acceptable anywhere.

Of course, in every group there are those who are prejudiced and somewhat bigoted. I deliberately prevented any discussion at the meeting because I know one or two members who needed to hear what you had to say, but who might have been "nasty" had I left the meeting open.

If you care to discuss your address with me further, I shall be glad to talk with you some time when you are in Trenton or I am in Newark.

Very cordially yours,

Robert H. Morrison
Assistant Commissioner for Higher Education
